Scenario Learning Earns District Administration Top 100 Products Award for SafeSchools Online Training System

K-12 administrators name online training program best in industry, six years in a row

Cincinnati, Ohio (Dec. 1, 2015) – SafeSchools Training, the leading online staff training system for K-12 schools, has been named a District Administration Magazine Readers' Choice Top 100 Product for the sixth year in a row. Created by Scenario Learning, LLC, the SafeSchools Online Staff Training System simplifies safety and compliance training for busy school administrators. The online program delivers a wide variety of expert-authored school safety courses, including Active Shooter; Bullying Prevention; Sexual Harassment Prevention; School Violence Prevention and more in one convenient system. Instead of shutting down a district for an inservice day to train, administrators can deliver this essential training through any web-enabled device. Staff can train when it's most convenient and the system automatically tracks training completions and delivers valuable compliance reports to administrators.

Nominated by superintendents and K-12 school leaders nationwide, the annual awards competition identifies the industry's best products that have excelled in technology, sustainability, and curriculum instruction. This year's winners were compiled from more than 2,100 nominations from District Administration readers.

"What's especially meaningful about this award is that it's driven by our customers who nominate SafeSchools Training every year and share their positive experiences with our program," said Brian Taylor, CEO at Scenario Learning. "We're proud to know that SafeSchools Training is helping to make schools safer places for students and employees, around the world."

To help schools become more efficient and maximize tight budgets, the SafeSchools Online Training System allows districts to complete their staff training online. Using the program, administrators can train more staff in less time for less money while making their districts safer places to work and learn. The program includes a new feature that allows administrators to build district-specific courses and policies in the SafeSchools Training System and deliver them to staff. And, every completion is tracked automatically, giving them one comprehensive training system.

"It was inspiring to learn about the products being used in today's schools and classrooms that are helping districts succeed," said JD Solomon, District Administration's editorial director. "All of our 2015 honorees should be very proud of this achievement."
